A Chinese Express. The Chinese are of a very slow and conservative turn of mind. Mails and messages are still carried across the remote country districts in wag-gons drawn by ponies, and during winter when the untended roads are nearly impassable the mails are frequently considerably delayed. The ponies are small, stubborn and under-fed, and curses and the whip are the only form of encouragement the drivers ever seem to use.

Dear Ron,

Who is Arthur Tree? I don't know. I like your paper very much, and was glad to get your letter. I saw the fire engines last night out for training. They came up Epsom.

Much love, Dollie
